If You Only See

You're coming around, your head is spinning

Open your eyes and catch your breath.

Behold your new world, a brand new beginning,

One day at a time and remember this,

If you only see what you want to see in this.

You'll have your share of pain and your share of heart-ache,

Your share of love and your wildest dreams

It's not what you take it's what you give it

Remember few things, will be as they seem.

I pray for a moment, you'll catch a glimpse in epiphany

And float in it's sunray, winding through this maze

Finding this

Some people see what they choose to believe,

Others are happy to remain naive,

But if you only see what you want to see in this.

So open your mind, you're going to need it.

Offer your heart though you know it will bleed

Surrender yourself at every moment

Live in it all, the bitter and sweet

Please understand, I couldn't be the one

To tell you what you needed to hear.

Please understand, please understand.